Arrah Go On Is Beaten in Tilt To Finish Line

Breath of Scandal Now Reaches Running of Suburban

By W. J. Macbeth

Among the winning favorites at Belnont Park yesterday afternoon came Airman, C. P. Winfrey's five-year-old brown horse, which had won his last time out so impressively as to attract a keen following. It was quite as well that Airman was up to himself in all the various elements. He had to be a mudlark to win yesterday, yet he did that so handily as to give the appearance of flying, and he won the feature event, which was all the more to his

This feature event, the fourth, was the Harlem Selling Stake, at a mile, which attracted a field of only five to the post. Though a cash value of $2,000 was guaranteed, because of the track conditions. Whimsy and Ed Roche were scratched. Most everybody was certain, after these withdrawals, that Airman had the call in percentage, and a heavy play resulted. He was one of three favorites that divided the card with the outsiders.

Little Ensor had the mount, and he landed the brackets quite as skilfully as anybody could wish. G. W. Loft's powerful big brown three-year-old colt Arrah Go On, which showed unusual speed down in Maryland, was full of early running, and went out so fast under the command of Kerr that he threatened to spread-eagle the field. Ensor did not permit himself to become perturbed a bit with this early sprint. He rated Airman off the pace for the first half mile. Then he started his drive.

Arrah Go On Overtaken

Arrah Go On Overtaken

Arrah Go On has a somewhat fractious reputation. He is a heavy-headed colt, as well as a headstrong one. Most everybody had him doped to run out when he hit the stretch turn. Arrah Go On fooled the wiseacres, who gave up hope when he continued to hug the rail. But Arrah Go On, apparently, was not in his best running mood, for, with victory within his grasp, he decided he might wait for another day and a better price. Once Airman began to move up on the pacemaker it was all over. Either the distance was too great for Arrah Go On or the colt too great for Arrah Go On or the colt lacked the necessary courage. He-stopped, anyhow, either from fatigue or discouragement, and Ensor won with Airman just about as he pleased. Sands of Pleasure, clearly outrun for more than half a mile, had plenty in reserve and closed strongly, though too late to get up within striking dis-tance.

One of the biggest upsets of a coon's age closed out the day. Cadillac, which was figured as a mortal certainty in a field of cleven, had all he could do to finish in the money. He was indeed lucky to do that well. Burlingame, a rank outsider, as good as 30 to 1 in the betting, would probably have romped home here had he not run to the extreme outside rail at the stretch turn. Burlingame was leading by three good lengths when he committed his big blunder. He lost close to a dozen lengths by the miscue and still finished within three or four lengths of the winner.

Kingfisher Home in Front

The winner, by the way, was William Martin's Kingfisher. This one saved a lot of ground on the home turn and won going away in a hard drive. Waterproof came with a rush in the stretch and outgamed Cadillac in the final drive.

drive. Waterproof came with a rush in the stretch and outgamed Cadillac in the final drive.

The fifth race, over the four-and-ahalf furlongs straight, developed even a more pronounced upset when Frank Robinson scored with Thomas F. Mc-Mahon, H. Watterson's two-year-old chestnut colt. This one was a 20 to 1 shot which simply raced Yuneed and Pigeon, two well played things, into the ground over the sloppy going. R. T. Wilson's Umbala closed very fast at the end under Ensor's guidance, but could not quite get up.

Facts and Fancies

Skims Over

Tobey the Squirrel Writes

EAR BROTHER: I was crossing Columbus Circle yesterday, and taking my life on my four feet, as usual, when I saw three automobiles sail by with toy guns mounted on the radiator. I suppose the new idea is if they happen to miss you they still got a chance to shoot you. It's getting tougher every day to get by on the Circle.

The other afternoon I lamped a Ford chase a pedestrian around Chris's statue five times, and when the pedestrian hopped the little iron fence to get away the Ford bit a hole in the seat of his trousers and then leaped the fence after him. It looked like the Ford was going to win, as it was pretty sore by this time, and the pedestrian is getting weak with his feet and strong with his breath. But the Columbus Circle traffic officer, who has flat feet, sees the Ford hop the fence and he comes running over on his corn cakes.

"Hey, you can't do that!" he howls at the Ford.

So the Ford quits. The traffic officer is a good natured bird and he don't mind a Ford enjoying itself now and then, but that ain't saying it can hop a fence, for what chance would a pedestrian have on Columbus Circle if they all did that? The next thing they'd be climbing stairs after a pedestrian and wrecking his home.

I suppose you wonder where I was hanging out all winter. I got a tip on the Garfield coal order, and I figured there'd be a fat chance of getting any heat in Central Park during the winter. The service over in the Park is fierce enough in summer, with a lot of pop-eyes waking you up Sunday morning and thinking you are going to three-cheer 'em every time they slip you a peanut. So I take a runout for New Orleans and pick up a lot of dope on the ponies that I'm using now out at Belmont.

Playing the Ponies

I'D BE ahead, too, if I didn't let a lot of Johns throw me off my system. The other day I was just getting ready to send in five berries on Pollux when Tom Thorp comes pushing through the ring with a wild look, like he has heard a rumor of the Columbia football

"Is there a fire?" I says. "No," he says, "but there ought to be one if King Worth don't win this first race." "Who told you," I says. "Who told me," he says, "King Worth told me. Hurry and you can get

So I rush over to the handbook boys and say, "Can I get 10 to 1 on King Worth?" and he says: "You ought to get more than that, but on account of the airplane bringing in the mail and the high east wind King Worth is now being peddled at 7 to 1." Tom is behind me, so I ask him if it is a good bet, and he says: "Ain't I been telling you the horse told me he'd win. What more do you want?" Then I sink five berries on King Worth and stand to win $35 and get off on the right

"I was going to bet on Pullux," I says. "Ho, ho!" says Tom. 'The field would have to be dead to Pullux for him to win this race. Pullux ain't right at six and a half furlongs."

I lam over toward the press stand, when I meet Frank Keppel, the shill guy for Jacques Curley's ten-ring wrestling circus. "Hurry, hurry," he says; "you just got time to get down on Kewpie O'Neil. If Kewpie O'Neil don't win this race August Belmont ought to be willing to give you your money back."

No Chance for Pullux

66T'M ALREADY taken," I says. "I've been steeered onto King Worth." "Ho, ho!" says Frank; "King Worth is a bum. That sounds like one of Tom Thorp's tips. He'd cost a guy a million dol-

"At that," I says, "I was going to bet on Pullux." "The field would have to be dead to him for Pullux to beat this race," says Kep. "Pullux ain't right at six and a half furlongs."

So I go up in the press stand to watch the race, and after the start there ain't nothing but one horse all the way, and he is Pullux. He comes in bowing and winking to the judges, and back about four miles there is two bums, who look like they are going to quit running and sit on the fence if somebody don't build a fire under 'em. They are King Worth and Kewpie O'Neil.

I saw Tom after the race and he says, "King Worth certainly run like a hound. It wouldn't surprise me if there was something wrong there;" and Frank Keppel says: "Kewpie O'Neil certainly dogged it. It looks a little strange to me."

So I figure the best way is to play your own system, especially after I see a dame over on the veranda of the clubhouse give her pro-Suburban. Fraternally yours, TOBEY.

P. S .- So they drafted Benny. Didn't I always tell you they couldn't make a right-handed war out of this.

N. B .- They tell me Charlie Dryden is in town. I ought to have a big week, eh?

HE seven young men pictured here constitute the lawn tennis team of Yale University, led by Captain Charles S. ("Chuck") Garland, national junior champion, the player on the extreme right of the line. In spite of the heavy inroads made upon Yale's man power by the war, this year's tennis team has shown its strength on the courts, having made a notable record. All the members of this squad of racquet wielders are under the draft age, else they would be on the fighting line; but it looks as though there might be several future court champions among the lot.

Coach Jim Rice Plans to Train Cornell Crews

Columbia University Board Accepts Veteran's Resignation

By A. C. Cavagnaro

The way was opened for Jim Rice. the Columbia rowing coach, to accept a similar position with Cornell University when the Columbia University Athletic Association accepted his resignation at a special meeting last night The Morningside officials regretted the parting, but announced that the resiging of Rice did not mean a cessation of rowing at the Blue and White in-

Cornell has been cager for the services of Rice for many years. When Charles E. Courtney, the dean of row ing coaches in this country, was injured, overtures were made to Rice to take up the work at the Cayuga Lake college. However, Rice could not obtain his release from the local institution. Recently Cornell again sought Rice and the latter then put in an application for his release from Columbia Athletic Association last night follows:

The statement issued by the Columbia Athletic Association last night fol-

"The Columbia University Athletic Association has accepted the resignation of Mr. Rice, tendered on May 23, with extreme regret. We deeply appreciate his expressed feeling that in these times, with the number of students so greatly reduced and the most important regattas eliminated, his contract with years yet to run was out of proportion to the services he could render and too much of a burden on strained finances.

"This was not the committee's view, but as we could not bring him to alter his opinion we have reluctantly yielded to his wishes. This does not mean that Columbia is going to abandon rowing. The committee is firmly of the opinion that rowing should be continued as in the past."
